Record and save GIF animations At startup, you are greeted by a semi-transparent window that contains an area for capturing desktop movement, and it stays on top of other applications by default. Before beginning to record, you can specify the animation quality and frames per second. Once you're satisfied with the captured footage, you can save it to GIF format by indicating the output directory and file name. Make animation adjustments and insert subtitles It's possible to open the animation in a browser or the program's editor to preview the footage and decide whether you want to keep it or not. Gif Recorder lists the time and delay for each frame and lets you adjust the delay times, insert a new image between any two frames, remove or re-arrange frames, as well as add subtitles. Further image adjustments can be made in your default graphic editor. Aside from GIF format, you

Gif Recorder is a complete tool for creating GIF animations, including tutorial creation, screen capture, and serial recording. Create GIF animations directly from webcam captures, screenshots, or recorded video Gif Recorder allows you to use your webcam, your digital camera, or recorded video (MTS or AVI files) to create GIF animations. As such, you can make GIF tutorials of the live desktop activity you're capturing, GIF screencasts that show the movement of an application, or GIF animation demonstrations that show how to use the Windows operating system. Show an AVI video in real time in the animation Gif Recorder provides a variety of ways to control how you want to show your screen content during the animation. You can select images from a folder, automatically capture all the active apps on your screen, or record only specific parts of the screen. The program automatically sets the frames per second and the recording quality. You can also choose the resolution of the recorded video and decide whether to scale it for displaying in an animated GIF. Capture screen activity in real time and record it When you record an animation, you can preview the images as they're being captured, and you can also record different parts of your screen. Once the recording is done, you can save the finished animation in GIF format and it will automatically be published to your online account on YouTube, Snapfish, Google Photos, or similar. Save animated GIFs as AVI files You can also save the GIF as an AVI video and easily open and import it in your photo editor of choice. Gif Recorder provides a variety of options for AVI file settings, such as the keyframe rate, frame rate, resolution, and color depth. Edit recorded GIF animation Gif Recorder's editing functions include a built-in image viewer and a built-in GIF editor. You can use the image viewer to navigate through all the captured images. Alternatively, you can use the GIF editor to insert an image, remove or re-arrange frames, and add different size images between any two frames. You can also preview and edit the color settings for each frame. The program lists the time and delay for each frame and lets you adjust the delay times, insert a new image between any two frames, remove or re-arrange frames, as well as add subtitles. WEGMANN Photo by Elizabeth Osunkoya/NPR Joe Stevens, a chronic stroke sufferer in San Antonio, is not happy with the medical establishment. "If something sounds too good to be true," he says, "then it probably is." When Stevens takes his pills, he also sits down every day with his wife and regales her with tales from his past that she still finds funny. "She enjoys the old fogies' tales, the he-said, she-said," Stevens says. "It's nice to share it. It makes you feel like you're still in it." After three strokes and a week in the intensive care unit, Stevens is up and moving, but he is struggling to make sense of what happened. Part of the problem is that he doesn't know what to make of the advice he's been hearing from doctors. "I just hope for the best," he says, "because it sounds so good to me." The best, in terms of keeping his brain healthy, is good nutrition. Over half of all strokes are related to diet, and Stevens has a lot of company. One in five Americans have some kind of diagnosed cardiovascular disease, and more than 10 percent of adults, one in 20, have a stroke. It's harder to prevent strokes than cardiac problems, because stroke can be so subtle. But nutritionists say that's the best we can hope for. When Stevens was in the ICU, his doctor, who hadn't seen him since he was in the hospital seven months earlier, walked in and pulled up a chair. "I'm a big time nutritional researcher," he said. "I read all the scientific
