The pulseaudio sink (output) was muted. While connected via HDMI to my TV via a sound card I had to unmute it via the media player connected via the audio jack in the laptop. Then I was able to enable the headphone jack and finally get sound out via the headphone jack. This was in case someone else has that issue. Edited: The solution was to toggle the above mentioned button to unmute. The mute' button on the multimedia control panel should be used instead of its not available. #ifndef _IPT_IOCTL_H #define _IPT_IOCTL_H #

In healthy subjects it was possible to obtain selective activation of trunk muscles by means of supine and upright postures. Application of the selective recruitment principle should enable a more functional (i.e. 'better') trunk musculature pattern to be obtained in various functional situations by exercising the dependent (or'spontaneous') trunk muscles selectively. In the present study, backrests were employed to investigate if the recruitment of trunk muscles during standing can be influenced by backrest angle. In 11 male subjects bilateral surface EMG recordings were obtained from four abdominal and three thoracic muscles in response to a range of backrests. It was found that the magnitude of EMG activity increased in the erect position, for all the muscles, with the exception of the erector spinae. It was concluded that the use of a backrest, even with an angle of 30 degrees, causes a slightly higher activation of abdominal muscles. It is speculated that this finding may be related to an effort to prevent a forward displacement of the lumbar spine. "I'm super happy, super well, fit and happy to be back here," Harrison told The Northern Echo on his arrival. "I was just there for a few days on a visit and it was a nice place to be, and the last place I was at was Newcastle United. "I was at home most of the time, away from home a bit. I think it was a good start, a good period for me but obviously with the season coming up, it is so important to get back to the right level. "It's important to start well.
