A: The problem is that you are defining a variable twice (nombre and bienvenido) and only one is being declared globally. You can do this (changing the second line): `int main() { int bienvenido = "Hello"; const char nombre = "Mauro"; / rest of the code / }` Or you can turn off the warnings in your compiler settings. The second option might save your skin if MPLAB likes you. See C++17 § 8.1.6: If a name has the same name as a variable declared in the same block or lexically accessible in the surrounding context, the program is ill-formed. A name is declared in a block or context if and only if it is not explicitly declared in the source code; see 7.1. The program is ill-formed even when no diagnostics are produced. A: It is a warning message, and you can suppress it by adding `-w`. When you compile under `-w` the compiler warns you about issues which, when ignored, can cause problems in later compilation of the program. And, since warnings are usually good things, it is advisable to suppress them, which is the reason for `-w`. A: declare a variable to be global - you are declaring it twice `/ global scope */ int nombre; int bienvenido;` is a must! My full review will be in there. Four-eyed lunchbox (pancho): A favorite site of ours for new products. Gemini Kiss (pancho): If you love the movie and want to try out some of the makeup used, this is a way to go. Barry Cosmetics (yb): This is where you'll find their foundation. You'll love the light coverage and never need to apply more than once! It's a cult product. You'll find their mascara, lip gloss, and blush here, too. I reviewed them here. I first made a small video in which I cataloged the best price-freebies I found for you guys. I found a lot of great products for under $10 that were on my wishlist (actually, some of them were on my biggest list! Lol
