Photovcarve Full 91

Indeed, you could get it running on windows XP under Wine or Crossover, (- of course, with a realtime graphical user interface too.) But. Though I've had to put off getting used to VCarvePro (and its smaller brother VCarve) in favour of photovcarve as I haven't used my Giraforce and Wawake's Piapro Mach3 in over 12 months. Thanks for the information and fast reply. Any hope of VCarve Pro being released on PC soon? I'll have to say though, that, if I was to use VCarve I'd probably go for the G2 2119 with planer, router and cutter which does come with a G2 Laser Diode Light [Ltd edition] which is $90. You have the same issue with my CNC that I do. Except that I can access my machine and have access to the plans. This is all running under Windows 7 64 bit. Thanks for the information and fast reply. I do need to do a bit of testing on a PC to get a proper opinion. If I were the boss of AB Electronics I'd be packaging it up for Windows x64 though. That must depend on alot of things like what MFG you have and how much they are backing you. I see you in c6a93da74d
