GeoVox is a voxel-based, real-time terrain generation tool, developed and published by Axis Game Factory in 2015. As a terrain creation tool, its most prominent feature is that its based on Volume Pixel ( Voxel ). With its help, game developers can instantly create lush AAA quality of environments from the start; create carve, sculpt, and generate scenes like never before; then play with and share them. Furthermore, the company has a new application for the PC and the Mac to create and monetize games on the app store. The company aims to release its version 1.0 of its AGF Studio free in the very near future. GG. The free tools are a lot like what the previous company Heavy Water originally promised. Designers can drag and drop assets, as if they were pulling parts from a warehouse to assemble a prototype. The tool library has a variety of themes, characters, cameras, game modes, and other assets. It also allows you to create your own custom objects for use in a game. The factory reduces the need to hire a bunch of artists and programmers to create things during a game projects experimental stage. And Axis says it requires no programming skill to use AGF PRO.
