First, clinical studies have reported that tumour recurrence is higher in patients with chemoresistant or radioresistant tumours.21{ref-type="ref"}, 22{ref-type="ref"}, 23{ref-type="ref"} Second, a cell line-derived from recurrent tumours is resistant to the anticancer drug.24{ref-type="ref"} Third, it has been reported that a low dose of 5-FU may produce higher colony formation and sensitivity to 5-FU in a moderately 5-FU-resistant subline of ESCC than a parent cell line with only a 3-day culture with lower concentrations of 5-FU.25{ref-type="ref"} We also observed, in the present study, that the proliferation of KYSE450R was much higher than that of the parent KYSE450 under 5-FU stress, despite they shared a similar mechanism of resistance to 5-FU. These results suggest that 5-FU resistance may participate in the recurrence of ESCC. We propose that tumour recurrence can occur through several mechanisms. First, the overexpression of ERCC1 increases the threshold of DNA damage, which subsequently decreases the sensitivity of tumour cells to chemotherapy and leads to tumour recurrence. Second, the overexpression of ERCC1 enhances the repair of DNA damage. This process renders chemotherapy less effective, leading to tumour recurrence. Third
